Preface

This textbook is mainly written for students of Communication Arts and people who want to practice their English through reading English newspapers. The book focuses on reading and writing skills which relate to the Communication Arts Professional. With this book, students will learn; for instance, particular headline vocabulary and structures, reading techniques, the language of advertisements, the writing styles of news articles and features, etc.

I hope this fifth edition will be useful for students as well as for any one who wishes to self-practice English by means of reading English newspapers. I would appreciate any comments you will offer.
